

Palliative Care - A Palliative Approach

Palliative care is an approach to care that improves the quality of life of people and their families who are facing the problems associated with life-limiting illnesses (Palliative Care Australia, 2017).

The Palliative Approach supports people to live with their illness comfortably for as long as possible through the prevention and relief of suffering that occurs from life limiting illness.

Prevention and relief of suffering is by means of impeccable assessment to identify changes so as the treatment of pain and other problems, physical, psychosocial and spiritual may be managed.

Good palliative care can significantly reduce both physical suffering and emotional distress (Palliative Care Expert Group, 2016).

“Palliative care affirms life and regards dying as a normal process and a part of living. It intends to neither to hasten or postpone death” (World Health Organization 2017).

A Palliative Approach is:

- Life Affirming
- Enhances quality of life by providing a support system
- Holistic approach to care for the whole person to identify personal goals and preferences for care – requires Physical, psychological, cognitive, social, spiritual and cultural considerations
- Family support system for family and friends to cope through grief and loss associated with illness
- Prevents and relieves suffering
- Applied Early from diagnosis of life limiting illness e.g., Cancer, Heart disease or failure, Chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, Dementia, Neurodegenerative disease, Chronic liver disease, Renal disease, Paediatric genetic or congenital disorders
- Team approach to address the needs of patients and their families, including bereavement counselling, if indicated

PEPA Program of Experience in the Palliative Approach
Funded by the Australian Government Department of Health